FERN HILL, OOTACAMUND,
19*th May* 1892.

MY DEAR SIR,

WE leave Ooty to-morrow. The stay up here has been very pleasant and enjoyable. Colonel Campbell is now able to move out pretty freely. He was out yesterday to see the races on the Cockrel's Course.

The pleasures of solitude have been very great for me on the hill tops and in the sholas: and they are on the increase. Milk and fruit diet have agreed with me thoroughly and have become very enjoyable. These and other circumstances put together, the present seems to be a most favorable time for me to retire.

I have now put in a little over 28 years of service, and during this period, I have not taken more than twice or thrice casual leave of two or three days each time. So I am now entitled to a privilege leave of furlough of two years, if kindly granted.

I have been most fortunate in enjoying uniformly very kind and considerate treatment at His Highness the Maharaja's hands and of yourself: and I have always tried to do my best, and at times in the early period, with unflinching courage. I have also done my duty as a citizen to the public to my own satisfaction. I have personally submitted to His Highness the Maharaja that I would cheerfully retire, if permitted: and if you will kindly help me in the matter, I shall feel ever thankful. Next to Sir James Gordon and Mr. Rangacharlu, you know me best.

I have some little property, disposing of which would enable me to clear more than half of my debt: and the remainder I could pay off during the 20 months or two years of my furlough leave.

I have deliberately written this letter: and beg you will give it the same kind consideration as Sir James would; and help to get me a pension the peculiar nature of my past services would deserve.

I remain,
Yours very sincerely,
A. NARASIM IYENGAR.

TESTIMONIALS

RAI BAHADUR A. NARASIM IYENGAR,

DURBAR BAKSHI TO HIS HIGHNESS THE MAHARAJA OF MYSORE.

Rai Bahadur A. NARASIM IYENGAR,

Durbar Bakshi to His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore.

Order dated 23rd November 1864, by His Highness the Maharaja (Krishnaraj Wodayar Bahadur) of Mysore, under sign Manual.

Narasim Iyengar * * have been appointed Masters, in the Huzur Free School, each on a salary of Rs. 10. Their names should be brought on the Establishment List and their salaries paid from November 1st.

I have much pleasure in renewing my testimony to the character of Mr. A. Narasim Iyengar, Tutor to His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore. He was admitted to the Raja's School as a pupil soon after I took charge as Head Master in December 1862, and made very satisfactory progress. He passed his Matriculation examination in December 1868, and his First in Arts in December 1869. In the meantime, he had, on my recommendation, been appointed an Assistant Master in the School by His Highness the late Maharaja. Both as a pupil, and as an Assistant Master he gave me the greatest satisfaction. I always found him very diligent and painstaking, as well as trustworthy. His class was always in good order, and he was of great assistance to me in laying the foundation of the present Raja's High School at Mysore. He possesses enlightened views in general, and freedom from bigotry and narrowmindedness. In May 1870 he was selected by Colonel G. B. Malleson the Guardian, to be Tutor to His Highness the present Maharaja, and I am glad to say that Colonel Malleson and others under whom he has been placed, have always spoken of him in the highest terms, and that he continues to merit their confidence.

(Sd.) J. DUNNING,
Late Principal, Maharaja's School, Mysore.

Extract from Guardian's letter to the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, dated 21st June 1870.

On the 18th ultimo I appointed one Narasim Iyengar, an Assistant Master in the Maharaja's School, to the post on one month's probation, on a salary of Rs. 60 per mensem. He has performed his duties to my entire satisfaction and he will be a valuable addition to the staff of the School; I therefore, earnestly solicit your sanction to his permanent nomination to the post.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

Extracts from Guardian's Reports, to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore.

Dated 2nd July 1870.

* * * The numbers of the school boys having inreased to 52, I have been compelled, subject to sanction, to engage the services of a third master, who however, occupies the second place in the School. On this subject I reported specially in my letter No. 39, dated 21st June 1870. I may add that the master selected, Narasim Iyengar, was one of the best masters in the Raja's School and that I watched his mode of education for a month before I engaged him.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

Dated 10*th October* 1870.

* * * During his (Mr. Jyram Rao's) absence, his duties are being satisfactorily performed by the second Master, Mr. A. Narasim Iyengar.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

Dated 1*st February* 1871.

Para 24. * * I cannot omit in the list of those to whom I feel deep obligation, the name of Mr. Narasim Iyengar, the Tutor. A liberal and well-educated Brahmin, his care for the boys never slept. He was fully conscious of the responsibility devolving upon him, and he performed his duties in a manner to elicit the sympathies and esteem of all with whom he came in contact: from myself the warmest approval.

Para 54. * * To the Second Master, Mr. Narasim Iyengar, I have alluded in para. 24 of this letter. I will only add that I have the greatest respect for him. He is an admirable teacher and is much liked by the boys. Indeed it would be difficult to find two men more fitted for their post than are he and Mr. Jyram Rao.

Guardian to H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore.

Extract from Secretary to the Chief Commissioner's No. 5848-270 of 20*th February* 1871, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

* * * In conclusion, I am to solicit attention to the excellent manner in which the Second Master of the School, Narasim Iyengar, is stated to have performed his duties.

(Sd.) ROB. COLE,
Offg. Secretary.

Extract from letter No. 1020-P. of 27th May 1871, from the Secretary to the Government of India, to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore.

* * * The thanks of the Governor-General in Council are also due to * * and to Narasim Iyengar, the second Master, for their zealous co-operation with Colonel Malleson.

(Sd.) C. U. AITCHISON,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Extract from the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner's No. 52, dated 5th June, to the Guardian to H. H. the Maharaja.

(Sd.) TREDWAY CLARKE,
Secretary.

Extract from Guardian's Report, dated 7th February 1872.

* * * The Master is the same who accompanied some of the boys on the occasion of their visit to Calcutta with Colonel Malleson about a year ago. On this, as on previous occasions, he was unremitting in his kind and attentive care of the boys.

(Sd.) J. D. GORDON.

Extract from Officiating Guardian's Memo, to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, 3rd January 1873.

* * * Mr. Narasim Iyengar has specially earned my commendation, not only by industry and care with which he has attended to the class in his special charge, that in which the Maharaja is being educated, but also by the good work he has done on occasion of excursions from Mysore, when he has always been selected to have immediate charge of the boys.

(Sd.) J. D. GORDON,
Offg. Guardian to H. H. the Maharaja.

Extracts from Guardian's Reports, to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore.

Dated 1st February 1873.

* * * Formerly Arithmetic was his (the Maharaja's) great difficulty: but the patience and care of the Master, Mr. Narasim Iyengar have enabled him to conquer the rudiments of that science.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

Dated 1st July 1873.

* * * In Mr Narasim Iyengar who accompanied us to Ootacamund, the School possesses a Master, and the boys a friend, whose enlightened and liberal views, rising far above the prejudices of his countrymen, are, I hope, gradually permeating their minds and preparing them to resist the pressure, which sooner or later will be brought to bear upon them by the priesthood.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

No. 45. Dated 28th February 1874.

* * * I cannot conclude the report without expressing my deep sense of the care and attention bestowed by Mr. Narasim Iyengar on the three young travellers. All that he did was well done. His forethought, his power of arrangement, and adaptation to all circumstances were alike conspicuous. To me it was a great comfort to know, that I had at my disposal a native gentleman so free from prejudice, so large hearted, and so trustworthy.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

No. 1. Dated 1st January 1[illegible]5.

*. * * In Mr. Narasim Iyengar the Maharaja has an able and painstaking master who spares neither time nor trouble in the task of education.

No. 20. Dated 2nd July 1875.

* * * The manner in which Mr. Narasim Iyengar managed the internal economy of His Highness's household at Ootacamnnd is worthy of all praise.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

Extract from the letter No. 8, dated 6th June 1874, from the Guardian to His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore, to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore.

* * * I cannot too often repeat * * and requires careful nursing and training by a master acquainted with Mysore human nature and with Mysore language. Such a master he has now in Mr. Narasim Iyengar. I could not find one more completely fitted for the work anywhere. His place could not at present, be supplied by an English master.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON.

Extract from the letter No. 2, dated 1st January 1875, from the Guardian to His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore, to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore.

d. * * But, above all, I would earnestly recommend that His Highness should be accompanied to Bangalore by his present Tutor Mr. Narasim Iyengar. It is scarcely possible to exaggerate what His Highness already owes to this gentleman, who has been his Tutor now for nearly five years. I have often alluded to the fact that the intellect of His Highness is a slow intellect ; one that requires on the part of the teacher the exercise of the qualities of patience, gentleness, perseverance, and temper. All these Mr. Narasim Iyengar has shewn to the highest degree. A Brahmin, he has no prejudices ; his views broad and liberal ; he has a manly mind ; a love of acquiring knowledge, and the act of imparting it. And he is quite trustworthy.

e. But in accompanying His Highness to Bangalore, Mr. Narasim Iyengar must be prepared to fulfil other duties besides those devolving upon an Assistant Tutor. I suggest that he should be the Manager of the household ; that he should arrange for its internal order ; for its provision of food ; for the payment of the servants. He would have a small establishment for this purpose, the accounts being sent monthly, for audit, direct to the Deputy Accountant-General and will naturally require some extra remuneration. But to this I will refer further on.

(Sd.) G. B. MALLESON,
Guardian to H. H. the Maharaja.

Mr. A. Narasim Iyengar was one of the tutors at the Maharaja's School during the time nearly two years that I officiated as Guardian. He taught the class in which the Maharaja is placed.

Mr. Narasim Iyengar gave the greatest satisfaction. He is a patient conscientious teacher, and takes a real and deep interest in his pupils. He is moreover thoroughly just and impartial.

On occasions of tours made with some of the palace boys he was selected to have charge of them ; and he invariably discharged such duty in an unexceptionable manner. I gladly bear testimony to his very valuable services and great merits.

(Sd.) J. D. GORDON.

I have much pleasure in certifying to the excellent services rendered by Mr. A. Narasim Iyengar during the last four years as Tutor to His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore.

His conduct of his duties in that capacity has been most highly commended by Mr. Gordon and Col. Malleson, and I have every reason to regard him as having fully merited their good opinion.

I trust he may continue in the same useful and creditable course under the new arrangements for His Highness's education.

(Sd.) R. MEADE,
Chief Commissioner, Mysore, and Offg. Resident, Hyderabad.

I have nothing to add to the foregoing testimonial from Sir R. Meade, beyond expressing my concurrence as to the merits of Mr. Narasim Iyengar—I am aware that during my tenure of the office of Chief Commissioner of Mysore he conducted his duties to the entire satisfaction of the Guardian to His Highness the Maharaja, and I had a personal opportunity of noticing his intelligence and tact in dealing with his young charge, when I accompanied the Maharaja to Bombay for the purpose of receiving H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, on his arrival in India.

COIMBATORE,
4th July 1876.

(Sd.) R. A. DALYELL, M. C. S.

To the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, dated—December 1876.

SIR,—As desired in demi-official letter, I have the honor to submit a brief report on the progress made by His Highness the Maharaja in his education, no such report having been made for any portion of the current year. The last report was submitted by Col. Malleson on the 1st January of this year. The next half-yearly report which was due on the 1st July was not made, in consequence of the change which occurred in the Guardianship. The present report, therefore may be said to embrace the work of nearly a whole year. The changes referred to and some uncertainty in regard to the plan of operations generally affected the School.

As regards His Highness's education, however, these changes have not affected it in any degree. It has continued without interruption under the indefatigable exertion of his Tutor Mr. Narasim Iyengar. The subjects of His Highness's studies have been nearly the same as before. They embrace General Geography, Elementary Histories of England and India, which have both been gone through once, the Elements of Grammar and Arithmetic, and Oral lessons in the Rudiments of Physical Geography, and other useful subjects, to which have been more recently added short pieces of Poetry out of Gay's Fables.

More recently a Vernacular Class was added to the School. But the study of the Vernaculars in an English School could not command the necessary attention, and owing also to the Pandit's want of experience in teaching young boys, considerable progress was not made. The Subject was taken in hand about the middle of the year by Mr. Narasim Iyengar, who in addition to his English Class-hours, and to his attendance on the Maharaja at home, took charge of the Vernacular Class and set himself so earnestly to work to remove the serious defect, that His Highness is now able to read and write Kanarese freely. The benefits of this measure have extended themselves to his dictation in English.

GUARDIAN'S OFFICE,
Mysore, 6th April 1877.

To

The Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore.

SIR,

I have the honor to submit for the consideration of the Chief Commissioner, the following recommendation for an increase to the pay of Mr. Narasim Iyengar, Assistant Tutor to His Highness the Maharaja, together with the grounds on which such recommendation is based.

2. The present time appears a suitable one for the increase proposed, as the measures advocated in Colonel Malleson's letter No. 2 of January 1875, have been, as far as Mr. Narasim Iyengar is concerned to some extent carried out, the result being an increase of the Assistant Tutor's duties and responsibilities. The change with regard to His Highness's residence which has lately been effected—with, I hope great promise of benefit to His Highness—rendered it necessary, that a trustworthy person should have the charge of seeing its details effectually carried into operation and of ensuring a due observance of the points decided on—so that evasions of these might not render the measure a dead letter.

My own observation and the recorded favorable opinions of my predecessors assured me that no one more fit for this duty than Mr. Narasim Iyengar was available—and I look to his presence and constant watchfulness to ensure a proper effect being given to the system instituted. This involves an almost complete devotion of Mr. Narasim Iyengar's time to his charge—night as well as day, his nights being spent in the Palace together with the greater part of the day, out of School hours.

3. These duties and responsibilities though not quite the same as those contemplated in Colonel Malleson's letter above referred to are nearly as onerous, and I have no hesitation therefore in endorsing and re-submitting the recommendation contained in that letter, for the increase of Mr. Narasim Iyengar's pay by Rs. 115 monthly from the 21st March, the date on which the new arrangements for His Highness's residence came into force. Mr. Narasim Iyengar now draws rupees 120 per month, and the increase proposed would raise his pay to rupees 235. * * * * *

OFFICE MEMORANDUM.

On the occasion of the Chief Commissioner's visit to Mysore, I took the opportunity of an interview with Mr. Saunders on the 15th January to bring to his notice, my letter No. 1 of 6th April 1877, on the subject of an increase to the pay of Mr. Narasim Iyengar.

I ventured to urge this matter on the favorable consideration of Mr. Saunders, having had no reason to alter the views I held when the above letter was written, or the grounds on which the recommendations submitted in it were based; and feeling strongly that Mr. Narasim Iyengar had by the faithful discharge of his duties and by the cheerful readiness with which he had undertaken, and since carried on, the more onerous ones referred to in that letter, fully merited the promotion originally recommended by Colonel Malleson and late by myself.

Mr. Saunders gave me to understand that he was entirely disposed to view these recommendations favorably, but that his official consideration of the subject had been postponed, pending the decision of Government on several questions connected with the Education of His Highness the Maharaja. On my pointing out that this delay imposed a great hardship on Mr. Narasim Iyengar, Mr. Saunders was good enough to give me his sanction to disburse to him rupees 100 (one hundred) per mensem in addition to his present salary from the 1st instant.

SIR,—In returning the papers forwarded for my perusal, I have the honor to express my opinion, that the increase somewhat tardily now bestowed upon Mr. Narasim Iyengar is thoroughly deserved. His position is one of trust, and his devotion to the work has been marked and untiring.

MYSORE BLUE BOOK No. I.

There is one subject, to wit, translation which the Maharaja continues to do with his native tutor, Mr. Narasim Iyengar, who also has been in the habit of assisting him in the preparation of his lessons, and is besides in a considerable degree his companion and personal attendant. I have great pleasure in acknowledging the conscientious and devoted care with which Mr. Narasim Iyengar has discharged his various duties in connection with the Maharaja.

Mr. Girdlestone, at the prize distribution of the London Mission School, Bangalore.

* * Nor should I conclude my remarks on this part of my subject without mentioning the name of Mr. A. Narasim Iyengar, who whether as a Tutor of the Maharaja in the earlier days, or as his adviser in the educational matters subsequently has shown a hearty and an abiding interest in promoting education. * * * * *

Extract from the Speech delivered by Mr. Porter, Private Secretary to His Highness the Maharaja at the prize distribution of the Maharani Girls' School, Mysore, presided over by His Highness the Maharaja in 1885.

* * * * * * I had occasion lately to speak of public spirit that existed in this city, but in this place I must single out one person who is the animating spirit of the scene before us. I do not need to mention his name, as his untiring devotion is known to you all (applause). His labor will bring its own reward. Happy is the man who finds it in his heart to work for so great a cause, and happy is the prince who has such servants round him. * * *

Extract from the Speech deilvered by the Honorable P. Chentsal Rao, C. I. E., at the prize distribution of Her Highness the Maharani Girls' School, Mysore, presided over by Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Lansdowne, on 12th November 1892.

* * * * * * * * * * *

We have, thanks to the indefatigable energy and labors of Darbar Bakshi, Rai Bahadur Narasim Iyengar, who had the exclusive management of the school up to the middle of the last year, and threw his heart and soul into the work and brought it to its present efficient condition, succeeded in removing the prejudices of Brahmins, the ecclesiastical aristocracy of India, against Female Education. * * * * * * * * * * * Another important point we have gained is, here also my thanks are due to Mr. Narasim Iyengar, people in Mysore now see the necessity and advantage of allowing girls to remain in the school for some time even after their marriage which unfortunately takes place in this country at too early an age, and actually allow them to do so. This has enabled us to train some high caste ladies as teachers, so that they may impart at least primary and secondary education to their sisters, sons and daughters—a work which I am convinced men can never do as successfully as women, especially in India where all males and even women if they are of inferior castes are religiously refused access in respectable families. * * * * * * * *

His Excellency the Viceroy then said as follows :—

* * * * * * * * * *

I should like to say that, since I have been here, His Highness has spoken to me in the strongest possible terms of the services rendered to this school by Rai Bahadur Narasim Iyengar, Darbar Baksi, whose name was so enthusiastically received when it was mentioned just now by the Honorable Mr. Chentsal Rao. (Applause).

I am glad to have this apportunity of recording my appreciation of the excellent work which he has done. (Applause).
